

Crouzon syndrome presenting as facial deformity and pan-hypopituitarism in an adult male

Thanh Hoang¹, John Shumar¹, and Mohamed Shakir¹

¹Walter Reed National Military Medical Center

July 1, 2020

Abstract

We present an adult patient with Crouzon syndrome manifesting with facial deformities and panhypopituitarism. Crouzon syndrome is a rare, autosomal dominant genetic disorder characterized by facial bone deformities, such as a prominent nose, frontal bossing, and ocular proptosis, as well as headaches, seizures, and developmental delay.

Hosted file

Crouzon syndrome final version.doc available at <https://authorea.com/users/311931/articles/465235-crouzon-syndrome-presenting-as-facial-deformity-and-pan-hypopituitarism-in-an-adult-male>

